LEXINGTON.-The races yesterday were well attended. The following is the summary :

SECOND RACE.

In this were nine starters. The race was won very easily by Rosewood's br. m. Blackwood, in three straight heats. Time, $2374, 2:33, 2:34).

THIRD RACE.

Time, 2318, 2238, 1738, 273.

The Senatorialrace in Kentucky bids fair to be as exciting as was the Gubernatorial canvass. The coming man is Ex-Governor Leslie, whom everybody likes. Ex-Congressman Beck, of this city, has for his supporters the little Lexington Press and a young lawyer or two. The other candidates are Senator Stevenson and General Williams.

The people of Kentucky are not willing to continue sending Blue Grass men always to the United States Senate; Mr. Beck will consequently be allowed to rest for the present at home, where he can do the most good.

List's Playing.

One lady of rank, at whose house he was spending the evening, committed the extreme indiscretion of asking him to play, a violation of all rules of etiquette among great musical artists. He had been exchanting her guests with his divine music in the earlier part of the evening, and had just come in from supper, when she preferred her request. "Madame, l'ai mange tree peu," was his answer ("Madame, I have eaten very little"), and, with this implication of having played out the worth of his supper, he left the house.

His contradictory elements only prove him to be what he is at the piano—half-demon, half-angel, if his mood happens to be a gloomy one, his fingers fly about as if he had a demoniac imp at the and of each one. His playing becomes almost infernal in its wild passionate power, and he looks furtively at his audience with a malicious expression of dalight and triumph, watching the effect he produces. This is the demon side.

At other times he will play with the deepest pathos, touching the keys so carcosingly, so tenderly, so weepingly, that I've see men listen with the tears running down their cheeks. And yet, when he rises from the plano, not a sound is heard. He is too great to be applanded. He does not need it. He merely walks quietly away from the instrument, waiting until some one racovers breath or sell-possession chough to speak, and then, perhaps, the first break in silence will be a long, deep-drawn sigh, and "flow grand!" spoken in an undertone of awe.—Scribner for October.

Chief among the so-called Norse monuments is the Dighton rock, situated significes to say that Schoolcraft, Edward Kendall, and Dr. Jeffries Wyman, who have carefully examined it, declare its hieroglyphics to be purely of Indian origin. The old mill at Newport is said to be a Norse baptistry, one of the most improbable conjectures ever made. The discovery in 1831 of a skeleton in armor near Fall River, Mass., was at once natiled by the monument seekers as the remains of a Norseman, and the poem written on that event by Mr. Longiellow has done not a little to strengthen the prejudice in the minds of the public. Probably the most radical work on this subject is a recent publication entitled "Decouverte de "I Amerique par les Normands au Xe Sicole," by M. Gravier (Paris 1874). The author not only advocates the presence of Norse monuments in New England, but olaims the magnificent remains in Mexico and Central America to have been the work of the Norsemen. According to his theory, in the face of overwhelming proof to the contrary, the Azicos descended from Norse ancestors. He cites the recent discovery of the rains of an anolent city in the province of Bahia in Brazil, in the midst of which was found the statue of a man pointing with his forefinger to the north pole. Of course, according to M. Gravier, he was a Norseman. A little work of nearly as radical sentiments was issued last year by a professor in one of our Western colleges.

Another pre-Columbian claim to the discovery of America is that which is based on a Weish chronicle of no an thority. In 1170, according to a tradition, the discovery of America is that which is passed in styless to guest the work of Schoolcraft, who says: "The discovery of a Weish clement in the indian languages and some of the Indian dislects have from time to time been pointed out. However, it suffices to quote the work of Schoolcraft, who says: "The discovery of a Weish element in the indian languages is w

Much has been said and written about Columbus having received all his information respecting the land in the west from the his of an old pilot who died in his house. Some recent atterature on the subject has appeared, but based, as has been all the rest, on the oversight so admirably pointed out by Irving in his appendix. Though men have continued to write on the subject, it has not been because of the discovery of any new authority for their claim.—The Galaxy for October.

abased. In framing the Constitution of the United States, the labor was almost wholly performed in Committee of the Whole, of which George Washington was the Chairman; but he made two speeches during the convention, which were of a very few words each. The convention, however, acknowledged the master spirit, and historians affirm that, master spirit, and historians affirm that, and it not been for his personal popularity, and the thirty words of his first speech, pronouncing it the best that could be united upon, the Constitution would have been rejected by the people. Thomas Jeffersen never made a speech. He couldn't do it. Napoleon, whose executive ability is almost without a parallel, said that his greatest trouble was in fluding men of deeds rather than

A Gentleman's Dead Mother Appears to Two

About a year ago the mother of a gentleman of undoubted respectability and intelligence, who resides in this city, died in Ireland. The gentleman came to this country nearly twenty years ago, since which he has not seen his mother. There was always a warm bond of love between the two, and the news of his mother's demise almost drove the gen-tleman to distraction. The following is verified by two ladies of veracity and

The nee of Engsish ives for the purpose of decerating living-rooms is more extensilve every year, and can not be too highly commended. Being very strong, they will live through any treatment; study their peculiarities, and manifest willingness to gratify them, and they will grow without sint, Most houses are to hot for them, as indeed they are for their owners. Neither plante nor people should have the temperature over sixty-five degrees Fahrenheit. Take care not to enteeble your lives by excessive watering or undue neat, and you will see they will not seem to mind whether the sun shines on them or not, or in what position or direction you train them. In deed, so much will they do themselves to make a room charming, that we would rather have an unlimited number of them to draw upon than any thing else in natures art.
